A practical guide to longevity and everyday wellness

Small daily habits protect a long, happy life.

Longevity is rarely about dramatic overhauls. It comes from noticing small changes early, keeping records in one place, and repeating simple preventative routines.

This kit gives you a clear home for their medical baseline, nutrition, and five-minute wellness habits. Take it one checkbox at a time. You've got this.

1. The Longevity Mindset

Preventative care starts with active observation. Three habits that protect long-term health:

- ☐ Know their baseline — check energy, coat, gum color, and appetite regularly so subtle changes stand out.
- ☐ Weigh-ins matter — a monthly weigh-in catches drift before it becomes joint stress or energy loss.
- ☐ Pace, don't rush — change food portions or exercise over 7–10 days so their body can adapt.

Adjust by life stage

Use your Pathfinder answer (or what you see at home) to focus this week's effort:

Growing young one	Growth-appropriate portions, gentle handling practice, and short positive intro to dental/ear checks.
Active adult	Stay consistent on weight + dental. Keep meals measured; protect joints with warm-ups before hard play.
Slower senior	Shorter, softer movement; sharper baseline checks; talk with your vet about comfort, appetite, and mobility.

3. Body Condition & Nutrition

A quick check to assess condition and keep energy steady.

Body Condition Score (BCS) quick-check

Under	Ribs, spine, and hip bones are easy to see. Little or no fat cover when you feel along the sides.
Ideal	Ribs easy to feel under a light fat layer. Clear waist from above; gentle abdominal tuck from the side.
Over	Ribs hard to feel under thick fat. Little or no waist from above; tummy may droop from the side.

Today's score: ☐ Under ☐ Ideal ☐ Over

Daily meal & hydration

Morning portion	_____ cups / grams
Evening portion	_____ cups / grams
Treats allowance	Keep treats under ~10% of daily calories
Hydration	Fresh water daily (a splash of water or pet-safe broth in food can help)

Treat ideas should be pet-safe for your species. When unsure, ask your vet before offering new foods.

4. Daily Preventative Routines

Five-minute practices for the top longevity priorities from The Guardian path.

1. Dental care & hygiene

Why it matters: Mouth health supports whole-body wellness over time.

- ☐ Days 1–3: let them taste pet-safe toothpaste from your finger.
- ☐ Days 4–7: gently rub outer teeth with a soft finger brush or gauze.
- ☐ Reward right after every short session.
- ☐ Aim for ~30 seconds, a few times a week — consistency beats perfection.

2. Joint mobility & soft movement

Why it matters: Comfortable joints keep them active and playful longer.

- ☐ Add rug runners on slick floors to reduce slipping.
- ☐ Warm up with 2 minutes of easy walking before fetch or hard play.
- ☐ For seniors: short walks, gentle rear-leg massage, no forced stretching.
- ☐ Stop if they tense, limp, or disengage — comfort first.

3. Digestion & weight management

Why it matters: Staying near ideal weight supports energy, joints, and lifespan.

- ☐ Measure meals (scale or marked scoop) instead of guessing.
- ☐ Swap some high-calorie treats for pet-safe, lower-calorie options your vet is happy with.
- ☐ Log one weigh-in each month on the ledger page.
- ☐ Change portions gradually over 7–10 days if you adjust food.
